

Welcome Back

Guys 😊

Where in the world ?

- If you could travel to any place in the world right now, where would it be?
- How is it different from your community?

Let's recall community service... Which of these community services would add to your community making it the best place to live in?

- Planting flowers.
- Visiting patients at the hospital.
- Walking dogs at the shelter.
- Reading to the blind.
- Building a house for a family.
- Serving food for the homeless.
- Tutoring children after school.
- In groups discuss, what your community is missing:
- What can you change about your community that will allow you to feel more at home or more comfortable?
- Where would this activity be held?
- When is the best time?
- Who will you work with?
- Why did you choose these activities?

Let's try to infer the meaning through context....

- After the huge fight we had, I didn't understand the concept behind the whole argument, it simple silly and childish of us to fight over a slice of cake.
- Christmas is that time of the year where you should donate your old toys and things to the children's shelter.
- It was her duty to make sure that none of the children get hurt playing in the garden.
- The Smith family are fortunate to have good, obedient children that always achieve high grades and make their parents proud.
- Every institution needs someone to run it correctly or else it will sink.
- Unless there be faith in the recipient, an understanding of the meaning of the sacrament and an acceptance of it, it is valueless or harmful.
- Mike was bragging about the main virtues of the car.

What is a Listening Community?

The increased popularity of social media monitoring has given market researchers a new approach to research - instead of asking questions and getting answers back, we can now 'listen' to what people are saying. Online we can listen across thousands of social media conversations 24 hours a day, providing a wealth of data.

Can a research community also help us listen to what customers want or need? In short, yes it can. They complement social media monitoring very well, helping add the context and understanding that social media monitoring cannot, with tailored recruitment for broader sampling, and providing accurate background data on each participant through transparent permission/opt-in processes.

A listening community needs to be planned well. You need to be clear on your research needs and how you will approach it. Out of all the community approaches to research that exist, this can be the hardest to master, structure and run successfully because it requires continuous thought.
